Legacy for Children Award 2018

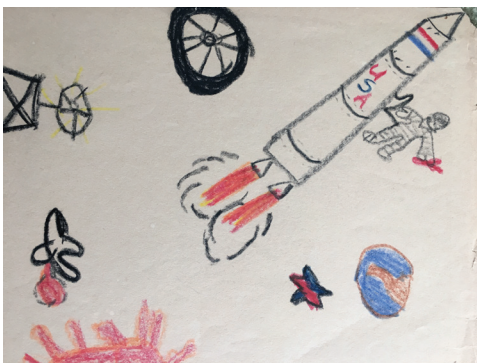

Friday, May 18, 2018, 6:00 p.m.
McEnery Convention Center, San Jose, Grand Ballroom

Honoring Steven L. Smith

Steven Lee Smith is a veteran of four space flights covering 16 million miles and seven space walks. His experiences viewing the Earth from outer space has given him the perspective of our planet as a global community without borders, and his aspiration is that Earth is a place that is tolerant of all religions and cultures.

Mr. Smith's impressive space accomplishments put this space traveler in the top ten ranks of American and world space walk durations, making him an inspiration to today's young people to learn more about science and space exploration. A San Jose native, Mr. Smith currently leads the Science Directorate at NASA Ames Research Center.

The Legacy for Children Award supports the Museum in its mission to provide hands-on educational exhibits, in-depth programming, and cultural events designed to give our community's children the tools that will help them grow into the talented, creative and diverse workforce of tomorrow. The Museums for All program supported by Legacy for Children sponsorships ensures that all families can visit the Museum regardless of ability to pay.

As illustrated by Steven's childhood drawing—kids' dreams do come true!
