Children’s Discovery Museum
I am going to Children’s Discovery Museum.
I know we are there when I see the purple building and the big duck on the roof! When we arrive, we might have to stand in line to buy tickets. I can stand by my family and wait patiently or play an I-Spy game with them while we wait.
I can do many things at the Children’s Museum. I can look, touch, play and explore. I will stay near my family so that we can visit everything together.
Downstairs, I can

Pretend to drive the fire truck, stage coach, and ambulance

Watch the traffic lights change

See life-size mammoths

Experiment at AirMaze
Pretend at the market

Build with big blue blocks

Explore water

Explore Potter the Otter’s adventure
Upstairs, I can

Learn about circles

Create art

Visit the Wonder Cabinet for those 4 and under
I can also go outside into Bill’s Backyard.
I can explore the plants, build new structures, climb, and dig.
Sometimes other kids want to build with me. We can share the sticks and build together.
I might feel upset because there are too many people and activities in the museum. If I feel upset, I can ask my family to take me to the garden for a break or to the Quiet Room downstairs near the restrooms.
We only stay at the Children’s Museum for a short time. When it is time to go, I remind myself that we can come back another time to play at the museum.
